NEW ISSUES HAVE ARISEN

Controversy Over B Street Worrying the Commissioners.

DEALERS SEEKING REDRESS

Those Who Have Leased Stalls and Stands on the Thoroughfare Do Not Want to Lose the Money Paid the Market Company—Last Batch of Applications for Liquor Licenses.

The District Commissioners having decided that the Washington Market has no right to monopolize the sidewalk on the south side of B street adjoining the Center Market, new complications have arisen, including the bringing of a suit by the company to restrain the District authorities from taking possession.

The Market Company, as has been stated in The Times, claims that under its charter it has the right to control the space to what was once the border of the canal, which would entitle them to possession of the space in dispute. The company has been accustomed to rent stalls and stands on the streets to dealers in produce, and the action of Commissioners will not only deprive them of this revenue, but will leave those who have paid for space without a stand and minus the rent money.

Already the dealers are casting about for redress. W. J. Morris, of No. 1294 L street northwest, addressed a note to the Commissioners upon the subject, asking whether or not the District intended to bring suit to recover the rental value of the stands. This is an entirely new aspect of the case.

It is not believed that the Commissioners have any grounds upon which to attempt collection of money for outsiders, nor that they have any such thing in contemplation. They have, however, referred Mr. Morris' communication to the attorney for the District, who is expected to render an opinion upon the legal aspect of the case.

LAST BATCH OF APPLICATIONS.
The last batch of 450 applications for license was placed in the hands of the police officers to-day. Over 100 responses from those first sent out have been received. The entire batch has not yet decided upon a date for the consideration of these, but it is probable that work will begin early next week.

The applications will, as nearly as possible, be taken up in the order of numbering, the first one hundred being first considered. They will be arranged, however, with reference to the standing of each, those against which there are objections being placed together, and those over which a contest is possible being reserved for a hearing of the protesters.

It is understood that the board will adhere to its rule of granting no public hearings, the arguments for and against being confined to written briefs.

The Commissioners ordered to-day that certain streets be laid out as follows: Under the provisions of the permit system, in front of No. 707 Second street northwest, around about at Sixteenth and Corcoran streets, in front of No. 1730 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and in front of No. 2018 Q street northwest.

It was also ordered that a sewer be constructed to serve lot 22, on the west side of Robber street, under the permit system.

AFFECTING RETAIL DEALERS.
The Commissioners issued an order yesterday, in amendment of license regulations, requiring that the retail dealers in farm products, whose stands have been heretofore on the curb of B street north, between Seventh and Ninth streets, shall be removed to assigned spaces on the south side of the same street, between Tenth and Twelfth streets, and that permits therefor shall be obtained of the superintendent of the wholesale market.

The evident intention of the Commissioners is, also, to drive from the markets those who buy and produce. A part of the order referred to specifies particularly that those only who bring in "farm products of their own raising" shall be given stalls in the new market space.

This order is in line with the recommendation made by the delegation of wholesalers at a conference with the Commissioners on Thursday. The interview, obtained in order to arrive at a understanding concerning the contemplated occupancy of the old Haymarket grounds as a wholesale market.

These suggestions were made in the course of the discussion, the dealers stating that without an equitable adjustment of affairs they would decline to bid for the new stalls.

NOT ALTOGETHER SATISFIED.
The sale of spaces in the wholesale market will be made on Monday, sealed bids having been invited.

The market men are not altogether satisfied with the arrangements, believing that competition will arise when the bids are opened.

Col. Wright Rivers, who was at the District building this morning, suggested the possibility of a number of proposals being received for each of the best stalls while many others not so desirable will not be wanted by anybody.

Col. Rivers suggested that all the stalls be exposed to public auction and let the highest bidder get his choice.

With regard to the proposed change in the center space, as suggested by the wholesalers, Col. Rivers was advised by letter that no consideration can be paid to the recommendation until the Commissioners are in receipt of funds. To meet this "condition" the suggestion is made that the bidders will pay three months' rent each in advance. Considering that there will be two hundred stalls available, at a low estimate, the sale will probably net $3,000 for the first quarter's rental.

SLEPT FOURTEEN DAYS.

Remarkable Cataplectic Condition of a Woman in Montreal Hospital.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—A remarkable case, which completely baffles the skill of physicians at Notre Dame Hospital, is that of Mrs. G. Drolet, who went to sleep thirteen days ago and only awoke late Thursday night.

During the interval she remained cataplectic condition, perfectly oblivious of all transpiring around her, partaking of no nourishment whatever, and to all appearances dead, save for a slight heaving of the breast caused by respiration.

Repeated attempts were made to awaken her. Pins and needles were thrust into her body without producing the slightest effect.

The action of the heart and pulse was scarcely perceptible, while her body quickly assumed a deathlike color.

Thursday night Mrs. Drolet surprised her attendants by suddenly arising from her bed and asking where she was.

During her long sleep she had been totally unconscious and seemed quite surprised when acquainted with the details of her long slumber.

THE HOWARD DENTAL CO., 937

FATHER WAS PROSECUTOR

Judge Miller Was More Lenient Than the Parent.

SICKNESS OF JUDGE KIMBALL

Unusually Large Number of Prisoners Crowded the Dock—Lone Fisherman Must Serve Ten Days—Bright Man Brought Low by Indulging in Strong Drink.

Owing to the illness of Judge Kimball, the lower court was presided over to-day by Judge Miller. There was an unusually large number of prisoners, men, women, and children of all ages, colors, and conditions, crowding the big dock.

Jane O'Day, an occupant of Ryder's Castle, was arraigned on a charge of vagrancy. Policeman Lynch arrested her and testified that she was drunk and begging last night on New Jersey avenue below the Baltimore and Ohio depot.

"Well, judge, your honor, I'll acknowledge to being drunk, but I ain't no vagrant an' no beggar," said the prisoner.

"The officer says you were both drunk and begging," said Judge Miller.

"I don't remember of begging none," said Patrick Hartnett, his father.

"This boy has been continually drunk for the past week or more, your honor," said the older Hartnett. "He comes to the house and makes the worse kind of disturbance, and I want you to rid me of the nuisance."

"I can't rid you of the nuisance. You say that that yourself by telling him to keep away."

"He won't stop for that. I've tried it."

HE WAS LENIENT.
"Well, if I send him to the workhouse, he'll be a vagrant sure enough."

"There's a case of threats against him, too, your honor," said the officer.

"Yes," assented the father. "He said that if I had an arrest I wouldn't live three months afterward."

"Come around here, boy. Why can't you behave yourself? What's the matter with you?"

"Nothin', judge, only I get drunk sometimes."

"Why don't you go to work?"

"They owe me some money where I was workin' an' I quit. If you let me off I'll go back."

"How about the threats?"

"I don't think I made any threats, judge."

"Take his personal bonds. Now, boy, as sure as you come back here again you'll get the extent of the law."

Charles Morrow and Ray White, little colored boys, were arrested by Policeman Quinnan, and charged with disorderly conduct.

"These boys with a lot of others congregated in Shaw's court and have regular stone battles," said Quinnan. "I caught these two here last night."

TRIED TO SHAME HIM.
"Deed, I wasn't dere, judge," declared Morrow. "Dat man knows well I wasn't an' he ought to be ashamed to start up dere an' say it. Wuz I dere, boy?" turning to Ray.

Ray said Charles wasn't there, but admitted that he was, and he was fined $2. The other boy was let off.

John White was charged by Policeman Herndon, of the First precinct, with disorderly conduct.

"White and another young fellow who was also arrested but forfeited his collateral this morning, were coming down Pennsylvania avenue, near Ninth street last night," said the officer, "wearing and using the most indecent language. Both were drunk."

"Judge, your honor, I was down the street with the other fellow, an' he met up with a friend of his. I haven't had my mouth open yet. They done all the cursin'."

"Was this man drunk?" asked the court.

"Yes, sir, very drunk."

"What, on three glasses of beer?" exclaimed the witness.

"You'll have to pay a fine of $3."

William Lancaster, a colored fisherman, was charged with vagrancy by Policeman Kanagan, of the Fourth precinct.

"This man was drunk around the wharves last night and making a great deal of disorder," said the officer. "He's drunk nearly every night."

ADMITTED HIS GUILT.
"I ha'n't fish every day, judge," said the prisoner. "I was drunk las' night. I'll admit, but I works every day."

"When did Judge Kimball take your personal bonds last?" inquired Prosecuting Attorney Pugh.

"He didn't take no bonds no time," replied the prisoner. "He gimme fifteen days in de workhouse, an' when I cum out I went fishin'. I bin workin' ever since."

"Ten days."

Walter L. King, once a bright civil engineer, but brought down to the lowest levels by indulgence in drink, was charged with disorderly conduct by Policeman Kimartin and pleaded guilty.

"I'm an old resident of the District, judge," he said, "been living here for sixty-four years."

"You are also an old acquaintance of the court," remarked Judge Miller.

"Well, I've been indicted by my bed for months with an attack of pleurisy and abnormal action of the heart."

"Have you any home?"

"Yes, sir, at Pikeville, four miles north of Baltimore. If you will let me off I will go there now."

"Well, go on to Pikeville," said the court, and King began his journey.
